Project description

The project LOST and FOUND is about the ‘post modern immigrant’, and what an individual, travelling through space and time has to lose or gain in their encounter with the destination, in this case, an encounter with the ‘West’

The visual research that comprises the installation is based on three aspects (Installation, performance, 5th dimensional film) that are embodied by the concept of \textit{homothecy}.

\textit{Homothecy} here is a metaphor to describe one point in space from different points of view. One can think of Matrushka’s (Russian dolls), one inside the other, geometrically occupying the same point, yet having a different relation to the outside world because of their relationship to each other.

It is the algebraic and arithmetical relation between what is lost and found, based on qualitative gain: whether or not the immigrant’s newly found values can replace his lost values. In the end the immigrant will find a new identity based on the changing conditions of life. Dignity and (self) respect play a key-role in this process.

Installation in situ:
Lost & Found (Loading and Unloading zone) all items are covered with grey blankets; a storage of items gathered around a visual statement.

The location where the project is presented is also completely covered with grey blankets (horse blankets), the walls, ceiling and floor like a tapestry.

Performance: Lost & Found Could you be loved (see synopsis).

The performance emphasis the celebration of Lost & Found: A screen is placed right in front of forty to sixty individuals sitting around a monumental setting of Lost & Found items. (Food, drinks, clothing, covered objects with the grey blanket, and so on...) watching a film video,

Video:
The film emphasis: The Urban Section, In a video that completes ‘Lost and Found’, I show a parade of traffic signs. In my eyes typically Western, even artistic signs, devised to ensure regulation and safety. They also, however, symbolise rules and laws, the obstacles with which a post-modern immigrant is confronted when attempting to claim his new home.
The State of Lost & Found is characterized within three processes:

HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE TO CONSTRUCT A HUMAN?
HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE TO DE-CONSTRUCT A HUMAN?
HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE TO RE-CONSTRUCT A HUMAN?
